Sign of things to come?

The Sept. 9 article on Canada's Economic Action Plan, by Bruce Cheadle of the Canadian Press, draws attention to the preoccupation of Stephen Harper and the Prime Minister's Office with the placement of signage to acknowledge program funding. Here in Halifax, that entailed yeoman effort by members of the Friends of McNabs Island Society and the province's Department of Natural Resources to install a sign on uninhabited McNabs Island in the middle of winter, presumably for the edification of seagulls there.

Since Fathom Five National Marine Park also received funding from the plan, I wonder if underwater signs were installed — perhaps just for the halibut?
