Student Science Writing and Video Competition 2011

Statement of Copyright

By entering this Science Writing and Video Competition, I hereby certify that, to the best of my knowledge, my video is original and does not infringe any copyright laws (see below). I agree that the NSIS and Situating Science Knowledge Cluster (Halifax) – the sponsors of this competition – may post my contribution (in whole or in part) as a part of this Competition and grant to them all broadcasting, publishing and other rights that the abovementioned sponsors consider necessary for educational or publicity purposes related to this Competition.

Note:

- Should you decide to include material in your video that is not completely your own creation, you are probably using material that is copyrighted. If you include any copyrighted material of any kind in your video you must secure permission from the copyright holders. Any entry with copyrighted material must be accompanied by documentation confirming permission to use that material. (This is generally a difficult and expensive process, so we strongly encourage you to avoid using copyrighted material.)
- Copyrighted material includes, but is not limited to: film clips, television clips, audio clips, game clips, books, magazines, images, performances, etc. Even featuring just the image of an item that is copyrighted (like the cover) can violate the law. You are welcome to create your own music, but it must be original (copyrighted music, performed by you, is still protected by law and cannot be used without the release mentioned above).
- As with copyrights, the use of any trademarks (such as logos, symbols, or characters) without permission could disqualify your video clip from the Competition and/or prevent your movie from being posted.
- Everyone who appears on the video should also sign a release form (see the NSIS website).
- Please ensure that, in the production of your video, no one engages in dangerous, reckless, or illegal behaviour. Any such behaviour will lead to immediate disqualification from this Competition.
